SITUATION IN KWEICHOW NOT REASSURING

Red Forces Said To Be Increasing

SERIOUS MUTINY REPORTED
FROM KWEIYANG

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canlon, To-day.
"Instead of decreasing, the Communist forces in Northern Kweichow are increasing."

This is the startling statement made by Mr. Hsiao Fu-chen, leading member of the South-west Political Council, when he was interviewed yesterday afternoon after his return from Hong Kong.

"The Kweichow situation is not promising," the veteran Kuomintang leader added. "There are still about 40,000 Communists roaming in Kweichow. The number of the Government forces engaged in suppressing the outlaws amounts to over 100,000."

Kweiyang reports reaching here last night stated that three battalions of Kweichow troops near Tung Tzu have mutinied and gone over to the Communist ranks, their main force being located at Chang-kanshan on the Szechuen-Kweichow frontier.

General Chiang Kai-shek, Chairman of the Military Affairs Commission, summoned his subordinates to an important conference at Kweiyang yesterday. While the anti-Red campaign was discussed, relations between Canton and Nanking are said to have been also on the agenda of the conference. Details are not available.

IRISH FREE STATE'S SPORT SUSPENSION

International Amateur
Athletic Federation
Decision

London, To-day.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation has suspended the Irish Free State, debaring them from participating in any International competition, including the Olympic Games, or allowing them to receive any teams from abroad.

The chief reason for the suspension was the Irish Free State's recent decision to refuse to accept the ruling of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, that the National Athletic and Cycling Association of Ireland should confine its activities to the Irish Free State. — Reuter.

Joyce Wethered's

Philadelphia, To-day.

Alexander Findlay, representative of John Wanamaker's Department Stores, who is handling Miss Wethered's American tour arrangements informed Reuter yesterday that "everything has been fixed up and Miss Wethered will sail on May 22 by the R.M.S. Berengaria for her tour, the details of which have not yet been settled. Miss Wethered will receive U.S. $200 for every 18 holes, plus two fifths of the profits." — Reuter.

Captain H. R. Sawbridge, whose wife is an American, at first stood relieved of his command of H.M.S. Renown, and reduced to half pay, as the result of his conviction of negligence in connection with the crash of the British battleship with H.M.S. Hood. He was formerly naval attaché at Washington.

WARNING TO DOG OWNERS

Magistrate Prepared
To Impose Maximum
Fine Of $250

DOGS MUST BE MUZZLED

Before hearing the summonses at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones issued a very severe warning to the public, asking them to be more careful regarding the muzzling of their dogs.

"I hope that everybody will take a warning from the terrible tragedy which happened over last week-end, and exercise still more care in looking after their dogs. I see from my list here that we have 24 dog summonses, at least, outstanding, and, with the certainty that rabies is right here in Kowloon at the moment, we must cut that figure down," said Mr. Wynne-Jones.

"I do not propose increasing the fine at the moment, but unless there is greater care shown in this direction I shall have to. The maximum fine is $250 and I am quite prepared to go to the limit if I find people are still careless about this, although I do not propose to do anything about it at the moment. This is merely a warning," he concluded.

QUESTIONS RAISED IN COMMONS

REPRESENTATIONS NOT CONSIDERED LIKELY

COMMUNIST ACTIVITY REVIEWED

London, To-day.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Alan Chorlton, Unionist M.P. for the Platt Division of Manchester, drew attention to the development of China, especially for the encouragement of bicycles.

Lieut.-Col. David Co ville replied for the Department of Overseas Trade, that they had recently arranged for the Commercial Counsellor for China, who was now in England, to visit the industrial centres with a view to interesting manufacturers in the possibilities of the cycle trade in China.

Mr. Chorlton requested the Government to represent to the Chinese Government that the export duties imposed on Chinese goods are both a hindrance to British trade and an important factor militating against the endeavour to restore China's trade balance.

Sir John Simon, the Foreign Secretary, replying, recalled that in recent years China had abolished or reduced the export duties on silk, rice, wheat and other articles and added that it may therefore be presumed that the Chinese Government is aware that export duties tend to produce the effect which Mr. Chorlton mentioned.

ABYSSINIAN NOTE TO LEAGUE ARBITRATION DEMAND

ITALIANS AGREE TO STOP
MILITARY PREPARATIONS

Geneva, To-day.

The Abyssinian note to the League proposes that the Italian and Abyssinian Governments should negotiate in Geneva, Paris, or London, as the Italians may prefer, in regard to the arbitration.

If after 30 days arbitrators have not been appointed, it proposes that the Council of the League be invited to appoint arbitrators to fix the procedure and to define the questions to be settled, particularly the question of the Italo-Ethiopian frontier according to existing treaties and to pronounce judgment in regard to the responsibilities of either side in connection with frontier incidents since November 23, 1934.

Meanwhile both Governments have undertaken to refrain from military preparations. — Reuter.

GERMAN MILITARY STRENGTH

Exaggerated Reports
Clarified

Berlin, To-day.

The forecasts that 750,000 would represent the future strength of Germany's army are described in official quarters as an exaggeration, as it is pointed out that no one-year class of conscripts reached even 680,000 as it is possible that 50 per cent. of the conscript would be disqualified for medical reasons and a further large number would be exempt as being indispensable in business or as fathers of families; thus the number that actually would receive military training in the next few years would be nothing like 500,000 and may only be one-third as many. — Reuter.

Sir John said he did not think representations would serve any useful purpose and added that it must be realised that alternative revenue would have to be found and that the methods of raising it might interfere equally or more with trade.

Admiral Ernest Taylor, Unionist M.P. for South Paddington, put a question in regard to the steps being taken to secure Chinese and British co-operation for the suppression of pirates at Bias Bay and Mira Bay.

CO-OPERATION EXISTS
Sir John Simon reiterated that co-operation already exists. He had received the reports of the consultations of the British naval heads with the Chinese naval and military authorities, but the details were necessarily confidential.

U.S. ARMS EMBARGO IN CASE OF WAR

War Department Should Control Industrial Leaders

SENATE MUNITION COMMITTEE
RECOMMENDATION

Washington, To-day.

The United States should declare an arms embargo in the event of war between foreign nations and should conscript all industrial leaders under the disciplinary control of the War Department, according to the recommendation of the Senate Munition Committee in its first report to the Senate after a week's investigation. — Reuter.

WEATHER FORECAST

The anticyclone has weakened and moved northwards, it is now being centred over the Yellow Sea and Korea. A typhoon is situated about 30 miles to the north-east of Y.F. It will probably move north-west. A depression appears to be forming over south-west China. The local forecast for to-day is: Partly cloudy with occasional drizzle or light rain.

After a mercurial cross-examination during which he was forced to reveal that he drew bonuses of more than U.S.$45,000,000 from the Bethlehem Steel Corp. in 1917 and 1918 from the profits of the company from war contracts, Eugene G. Grace, president of the steel company, shook hands with his chief inquisitor, Senator Gerald Nye, (left), chairman of the United States munitions probe. He objected to the idea of taking profits out of war.

GENERALISSIMO'S PLAN

STRESA CONFERENCE AT BORROMEO PALACE

Mussolini Orders Preparations
To Be Made Immediately

Rome, To-day.

Signor Mussolini has ordered preparations for the Stresa conference to be made at the famous 17th century villa, Borromeo Palace on Bella Island in Lake Maggiore.

The palace contains some of the most magnificent reception rooms in Italy, overlooking beautiful gardens rising in 10 terraces above the lake. — Reuter.

Canton, To-day.

For the purpose of conducting propaganda and enlightening the military authorities on the world situation, a new secretariat of the First Group Army was formed yesterday. Mr. Chen Yu-kun, publisher of the Min Kuo Jih Pao, the orthodox local official newspaper, is appointed director of the new department with the high rank of Lieutenant-General.

The assistant director is Brigadier General Chung Chieh-min, who is concurrently sectional chief of publicity, translation and research work. Both officials assumed their respective posts yesterday morning, the oath of office being administered by Lieut-General Miao Pei-nan, Chief of Staff of the First Group Army.

EUROPEAN LADY INJURED

Bus Wrecks Rickshaw
In Kowloon

Miss I. Holland, a teacher at the Dominican Girls' School, is now lying at the Kowloon Hospital suffering from injuries she sustained when the rickshaw No. 102 in which she was riding was struck by a bus late on Saturday night.

The accident occurred in Chatham Road opposite the Harbour View Hotel and it appears that the bus was travelling in the same direction as the rickshaw and that the driver of the bus was unable to see the rickshaw in time to stop it. The rickshaw driver was not injured.

ANGLO-POLISH DISCUSSIONS OPEN TO-DAY

Objections To Eastern
Pact Expected

SERIES OF BILATERAL PACTS
FAVOURABLE BY M. BECK

Warsaw, To-day.

Mr. Anthony Eden, the Lord Privy Seal, begins his talks with M. Joseph Beck, the Polish Foreign Minister, at 11 o'clock to-day. The scope of the discussions will include all the points mentioned in the Anglo-French communique of February 3.

It seems almost certain that M. Beck will emphasise the Polish objections to an Eastern Pact and that Poland, like Germany, thinks a series of bilateral pacts is more valuable in promoting security without exposing Poland to the danger of being drawn into what she considers avoidable disputes. — Reuter.

MR. ANTHONY EDEN AT WARSAW

Officially Welcomed
On Arrival

CONVERSATIONS WILL END
TO-MORROW

London, To-day.

Mr. Anthony Eden, the Lord Privy Seal, whose mission to Russia was concluded on Sunday night, travelled yesterday by rail to Warsaw, where he arrived in the evening. The Polish Ambassador had previously proceeded to Warsaw to be present, together with representatives of the Polish Government, the British Ambassador and members of his staff, to welcome Mr. Eden.

Home Government And Dominions

BRITAIN KEEPING IN TOUCH
REGARDING FOREIGN POLICY

London, To-day.

Mr. J. H. Thomas, the Dominions Secretary, in reply to a question in the House of Commons yesterday, said that every effort was being made to keep the Governments of the Dominions in touch with the policy and action of the Government of the United Kingdom in respect to foreign affairs. He had had no indication, he said, that any of them dissented from the general foreign policy being pursued by the British Government. — British Wireless Service.

SATISFACTORY VISITS

On Mr. Anthony Eden's return, the European situation will be subjected to a careful study by the British Government in the light of reports submitted by him and the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon.

The value of this unique series of visits to foreign countries is fully recognized. The contacts established have served the purpose expected of them and the... (Continued on Page 12)

RETURN OF THE HEART-SHAPE NECKLINE

ANOTHER VICTORIAN REVIVAL

(By The Hon. Mrs. C. W. FORESTER)

London. There is endless variety in the presenting of the different silhouettes. Every collection displays models proving the success of violent contrasts in corsages and skirts, trimming and fal-lals. The most pronounced changes and variety are declared in the silhouettes for evenings. The lower décolletage takes its cue from the correct cut for the coming Courts, which is an immense improvement. The line is bold, either in a wide heart-shape or a low-square. The "V" back is higher, and, if left bare, the best evening frocks have a wide fluffy cape, or a smartly semi-tailored sort of coat, or a hard-defined capelet to complete. Later the evening corsage of the late 'nineties will be seen—simple, but free and sweeping—lines that demand no trimming.

Backs in many cases are cut higher than the front décolletage, where the quaint fashion of the elongated spray or clustered posy reaching to the belt is in vogue. This lower line is more becoming than the throttled-up-to-the-throat draperies of last season.

Another and always charming décolletage is the deep "V" with fichu drapery and above-the-elbow sleeve. The wider Victorian bertha is best with the cape-top or tiny puff.

Circular Skirt

The "come-back circular" skirt as interpreted by the modern dress artist can be fascinating. Slim and semi-fitting round the waist and hips, the debutants' satin and silk skirts spring out above the knee into billowy godets.

A noted designer showed me a bridesmaid's gown of the new rich cream, rather stiff satin. The skirt fitted hips to the knees, then simply flung itself into foamy frilled godets all round, resting on the ground. The corsage, low and heart-shaped back and front, and caught by pearl shoulder-straps, was worn under a long-sleeved, short cut-away coat, fastening with a tiny basque and two large satin buttons. In a way this frock was practical, as it could be worn later for Ascot and would make a lovely dinner frock!

Colours and materials seem made for the debutante. Taffetas in pastel tones and apple-greens are for ball dresses. Many of these have the umbrella skirt, and are trimmed with festoons and frills of coloured nets and laces. Satin and moire, both stiffened, are charmingly aplashed with silver. Some moires have coloured contrasting threads woven in either silk or metal. A favourite way with the low "V"-shaped décolletage is to give wide folds of its own fabric, or tissue, forming straps from the belt at waist, crossing back and front.

Some designers favour the net and lace evening frocks in pale shades, with deep frilly ruffles and shoulder capes, thickly studded with sequins dyed to darker hues. White and palest grey nets show black and dark silver spangles. These fluffy additions take off any idea of age. No less lovely are the stream-line princess moulded garments in a clinging crepe, satin, or rich brocade and lame. We can be classic and statuesque, austere Victorian, elegantly Edwardian, or an alliance of the "forties" and 1935.

Many Periods

Fabrics, styles, fashions and fancies are taken from many periods. It is the modern rendering of them which will decide costumes for this year. Every evening gown seems to be a picture in itself, but there is a marked difference between the "little" frock and the "grande toilette." The five o'clock-to-twelve simple and semi-tailored garment is a smart affair, but entirely apart from the dinner and dance dress.

THE NEW PETER PAN COLLAR

Attractive Design In White Crimped Material

Many of the new models show a wide flat Peter Pan collar attached to the upstanding "clerical" band, made in white organdie, or kind of transparent pique, with a raised woven ridge design.

These are trying to wear because the effect is rather hard. More becoming are the new flat Pierrot ruffles in biscuit-coloured tawn or muslin. These are smocked in fine stitchery in soft contrasting colours, with a pique-edge, and these are cuffs to match.

Of the same order is an attractive design in white crimped material, stitched in harlequin lines of different colours; this is shown in an artistic variety of harmonious colours, with a predominating colour which can be chosen to suit the frock. The frill is attached to a narrow "Stand-up" neckband.

BRUSHES AND COMBS

They Should Not Be Washed In Hot Water

Combs should not be washed in hot water. A daily dry-clean is better than infrequent washing. They should be well brushed with a small wire brush or stiff nail brush, and rinsed in cold water. Another method is to pass a thread little fine whitening or jeweller's rouge. For ivory, dip a slice of lemon into salt, rub it on, rinse off, dry thoroughly, and then polish with a little furniture cream. Ebony should be rubbed with vaseline or olive oil, which should then be wiped off. Plain wooden backs should be polished with furniture cream. Silver can be polished with any silver polish, but tarnishes less quickly if it is just washed with borax and warm water.

PALE, PEPPLESS GIRL BECAME PRETTY — AND WASN'T SHE PLEASED!

It all happened in 30 days in a leading hospital in Canada. In November 1933, the girl was pale, run-down and lacked vitality. Weight abnormal, only 91½ lbs. Her blood, when tested, was found to be low in red corpuscles and lower still in haemoglobin, the red substance in the red corpuscles. She was given a 30-day treatment. And what a happy change took place!

She gained nine pounds and her complexion glowed with rosy health. Her face rounded out and she became positively pretty. The treatment—shown by a second blood test—had greatly increased the red corpuscles and haemoglobin in her blood, consequently she felt and looked radiantly well. The preparation that worked these wonders was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

This famous old remedy restores health in a most constructive way. We know that the blood carries nourishment and vitality to every part of the body. But unless the blood has a sufficient number of red corpuscles and red-colouring substance called haemoglobin, it cannot carry on its vital work. It is here that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills produce constructive benefits. This remedy increases, in most cases, both the red corpuscles and the haemoglobin. Blood test prove it!

Good looks and good health are too precious to neglect or experiment with. If your feelings and your mirror tell you that you are underweight, nervous, pale, or easily tired out—take this tested remedy. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for 30 days, as the girl mentioned above did; they are obtainable from your chemist. Then see how substantially you have gained in beauty and health.

"KID MILLIONS"—KING'S THEATRE

"Kid Millions", Eddie Cantor's annual musical extravaganza for Samuel Goldwyn, brings the famous comedian to the screen as a boy Cinderella of the Brooklyn waterfront who becomes the heir to a fortune in buried treasure in the land of the Pyramids.

Ann Sothorn, Ethel Merman, Block and Sull, George Murphy and this season's crop of Goldwyn Girls prance along the Nile with Eddie in this fast-paced, fun-packed musical tale of adventure in the harem of the Shéhé and the tombs of his fathers.

The story and dialogue were written by Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin and Nunnally Johnson, while Walter Donaldson and Gus Kahn, Burton Lane and Harold Adamson contributed the musical songs numbers.

The elaborate "ice cream fantasy", a poor boy's dream come true, in which Eddie, the millionaire, opens a free ice cream factory for boys and girls, is filmed entirely in Technicolor under the direction of Willy Fogarty and photographed by Ray Rennahan. "Kid Millions" is released through United Artists.

"BROADWAY BILL"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

"Broadway Bill", a comedy romance starring Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, is now at the Queen's Theatre. It is a Columbia release.

The story is that of Dan Brooks (Warner Baxter) who is a nomad at heart, but the son-in-law of J. L. Higgins (Walter Connolly) who controls everyone and everything in Higginsville. Dan finds life intolerable kinks over the financial apple-cart and goes his way. With him goes his racehorse "Broadway Bill" and the coloured groom Whitey (Clarence Muse).

The developments that follow are filled with drama, pathos and comedy. Dan has to put all his savings to keep his horse, "Broadway Bill" who in his first race throws his jockey at the start. In his big race (the New York Derby) where he started at 100-1 he wins after a tremendous fight but falls down dead 100 yards past the post.

"LEGONG"—CENTRAL THEATRE

"Legong", an all-technicolour South Sea romance, set in the Island of Bali, is Paramount's latest production now showing at the Central Theatres.

"Legong" was filmed in Bali, with an all-native cast. The two young principal players in the picture were of different castes, and herein lies the story.

Poutou, the beautiful female lead in the picture, was of high caste stock. Nyong, the handsome male lead with whom Poutou fell in love, was of a lower caste. Because of the difference in social standing, Poutou at first would not condescend to speak with her lover, and he did not dare speak to her. So when intimate scenes were made between the two, Poutou spoke her own high caste language, and Nyong, spoke his own low caste language. Although they understood one another perfectly they each feigned deafness to the other's language.

"Legong" is a native word, meaning "The Dance of the Virgins."

"STRICTLY DYNAMIC"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

"Strictly Dynamic" a human drama behind the microphone, featuring Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante and Lupe Velez in an RKO-Radio production now showing at the Majestic Theatre.

Durante portrays Moxie Slight, a renowned radio star with an ambition to become cultured. His agent George, sells him Nick Montromery, an erstwhile poet, as a gay writer after glimpsing the poet's wife.

Durante offers one of the best performances of his career in "Strictly Dynamic", and Miss Velez is still as impetuous and as peppery as ever. The Mills Brothers are presented in special numbers, while Eugene Pallette, Minnie Gombel, Sterling Holloway, Franklin Pangborn and Jackie Searl are included in the cast.

SVEN HEDIN ALLOWED TO REMOVE SPECIMENS

38 Chests For Sweden

The National Commission for the Preservation of Antiquities in Vanuatu has granted permission to Dr. Sven Hedin to take 38 chests of specimens with him to Sweden. Most of the specimens were collected by the Sino-Swedish Expedition to Central Asia in 1923 and are duplicates. There are seven chests of Stone Age implements.

SNATCHED BOY FROM CROCODILE'S JAWS

Native's Heroism Gains Highest Reward

Juma Kalani, a retired pensionless African Government servant, who recently received the Royal Humane Society's silver medal, saw a crocodile seize a small native boy who had fallen into the water. Although unable to swim, he leapt into the mud and waded, pulling at the boy's arm, tried to bring him to the surface. The crocodile fought fiercely for its prey.

Juma's small son threw a spear to his father, who, while retaining his hold of the boy, stabbed the reptile with the spear. The crocodile tore his teeth clear of the child's legs, and then turned to attack Juma, seizing him by the hand and wrist, crushing the bone and permanently damaging the arm. Juma pushed the child behind him into shallow water while he continued to stab the crocodile until it released his arm and made off. Injured internally, Juma had to find his way to a hospital over 100 miles away to undergo a serious operation. It was only by a chance remark that his rescue was discovered.

"TWO SECONDS"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

"Additional evidence of the versatility of Edward G. Robinson, as a master delineator of human types is provided in his latest First National picture, "Two Seconds."

Robinson, who has appeared as gunman, gambler, editor, and oriental, has always been a stone-hearted man, dominating men and events with an inflexible will and daring which carried all before it. In "Two Seconds" however, he portrays John Allen, a hard-working iron worker who is a victim of circumstances.

As Allen, Edward G. Robinson makes a radical departure from the characters he has been giving picture audiences, beginning with "Little Caesar" on through "Five Star Final" and "The Hatchet Man."

Preston Foster, Vivienne Osborne, Guy Kibbee, J. Carroll Nash, Otto Hoffman, Helena Phillips, Burton Churchill, Dorothy Wolbert, Edward McWare and William Janney lend excellent support.

"WHOM THE GODS DESTROY"—STAR THEATRE

Dealing with the dramatic question of how much a man should justly sacrifice for humanity, "Whom the Gods Destroy," featuring Walter Connolly, Doris Kenyon, and Robert Young, is now showing at the Star Theatre. In these days of human sacrifice this picture offers a psychological question that is of paramount interest.

Beginning with a thrilling shipwreck in which a man disguises himself as a woman to save himself for the sake of his family, it rises to dramatic heights that will move the most blasé audience. Besides Connolly, Miss Kenyon and Young, the cast includes Hobart Bosworth, Gilbert Emery, Jack McHale, Mary Carr, Rolfe Lloyd, Geneva Mitchell and Scotty Beckett. The director is Walter Lang.

"BABY TAKE A BOW"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

Shirley Temple, the five-year-old star, scores a triumph in Fox's current release, "Baby Take A Bow," with James Dunn and Claire Trevor.

As the baby daughter of James Dunn and Claire Trevor, she provides sparkling comedy with a thrilling climax.

The story deals with the struggle for happiness and success of a young man, just out of prison, a girl who marries him because she believes in him, the result of their union, and an adorable baby girl who is the pride and joy of her mother.

BRIDGE NOTES

TRICKING A PARTNER

By Ely Colburn

The feeling existing between two partners should be one of co-operation. The player that Fate has chosen to face you for any given rubber should be treated not as an enemy who must be out-guessed and out-manoeuvred but as an ally who at the moment has the same mission in life as you.

However, to prove that even this rule has its exception, I saw a most unusual incident take place the other day. The South player, as a result of having made a shaded bid on an early round, suddenly found himself in a position where he had to think of a way of out-guessing his partner, and thus preventing that player from making what would normally be a sound and correct bid, but what in this instance would force the North and South partnership into too high a contract. South did this in a most unconventional, albeit ingenious way.

1—A minimum takeout double, but with very fine support for both majors, South cannot be greatly troubled for choosing the double rather than the simple overall, despite the fact that the hand contains a bare three honour-tricks.

2—A deliberate shut-out overbid and quite an overbid at that. West merely wishes to make it hard for the opponents to get together at their best final contract. He hopes that by cutting out several rounds of bidding he will make North and South get either too high or not high enough.

3—Melodramatic, but sound. With a partner who has made a vulnerable double, North is naturally interested in a slam in one of the major suits. North realises that if he bids only four hearts or four spades, the bidding will probably die there and he will thus not have a chance to show both suits. He decides therefore to force his partner to pick the suit after which he himself can raise it to six. Although the five-club bid is a lie in that North cannot control the first round of the suit, the lie is of the "little white" variety.

4—South knows his partner to be a very liberal bidder who usually does not allow much leeway and who would not allow for a possibly shaded takeout double. He also knows the meaning of North's bid and knows he can bid five of either major suit in safety, but he fears that the moment he bids five North will bid six and realise from his own hand that this contract almost certainly cannot be made. South therefore decides to take a gambling chance to get out at a makeable contract. He decides that if he can get his partner to bid five of one of the majors that will give him (South) the last say and a chance to pass. The only way to do this of course is to make a bid under five hearts or five spades, and the only possible bid is five diamonds. Of course, if North passes, this will be most disastrous. But from the way the bidding has proceeded, South is practically certain that North has both major suits, and that the last say, knowing that South must have at least one of the major suits, will naturally fall to him. South is therefore gambling that his partner will pass five diamonds and that he knows he is playing with fire, South goes ahead with his plan.

GAINING DEGREE IN RECORD TIME

A Chicago Prodigy

Louis A. Dexter, 19-year-old student at the University of Chicago, has just received the degree of Bachelor of Science, after only one and two-thirds years of study. Young Dexter, who comes from Belmont, Mass., thereby attains his degree in the fastest time that the university has known. He is majoring in political science, and during the first year passed eight examinations, seven of which comprised the first two years of college work and the eighth the third year.

I don't know whether, when North bid five hearts, he knew what his partner was doing or whether he just wanted to deny diamonds. I do think, however, that five hearts was North's correct bid for a combination of the above reasons. On this most unusual bidding, I believe an imaginative North player should suspect that his partner is passing the buck back and asking him to choose the major suit, as it is most unlikely that South's double was predicated on a good long diamond suit and only indifferent major suit support.

South has achieved the result he was looking for. By adroit manipulation he has succeeded in trapping his own partner. He has forced the latter to show the suit and give South himself the last say, of course, is a pass.

Obviously the two minor suit Aces had to be lost on this hand and a contract of six would have gone down to defeat.

I heard South ask his partner after the hand what he would have done if the response to his five-club bid had been five spades instead of five diamonds. North answered that he would unquestionably have bid six. It would seem therefore that South's dangerous bit of trickery was most necessary to win the partnership out of the trap.

TOURIST AGREEMENT TO BE EXTENDED

The tourist agreement between Poland and Yugoslavia, which should have terminated on July 1, has been extended by another three months to November 1, 1935.

The agreement, which was signed in Belgrade in 1932, provides for the exchange of tourists between the two countries.

The extension of the agreement is a result of the friendly relations between the two countries.

The agreement also provides for the exchange of cultural and scientific missions between the two countries.

BUNNY AUSTIN OVERWHELMED IN MONTE CARLO TENNIS FINAL

80,000 SPECTATORS AT LEAGUE MATCH

ARSENAL'S DRAWING POWERS

LEADERS SAVED BY PERFECT DEFENCE

London, February 25.

AN enormous crowd of 80,000, who paid £4,600 for admission, saw Manchester City and Arsenal divide the points in a match vital to both clubs on the Maine-road ground.

The official attendance figures were 77,582, to which have to be added season-ticket holders and guests of the club. The gate is a record for League football in England, the previous best being 76,000 at Chelsea v. Arsenal at Stamford Bridge in 1930.

The drawing power of the Arsenal is amazing. This is the fifth ground record they have broken this season, and their own League receipts at Highbury are in advance of 12 months ago.

Although there were eight internationals in the Arsenal team that opposed Manchester City, the Lancashire view very definitely was that City would win by a convincing score.

A draw, then, was a disappointing result from a City standpoint. But they did nothing to merit more than one point; indeed, Arsenal held the lead until 10 minutes from the end, when Brook equalised.

The match will not be remembered as a football classic. The tackling was too keen and the pace too hot for fitness. Both sides realised the importance of the result to their championship prospects, and, inevitably, the duel was decided in the atmosphere of a cup-tie.

Perfect Covering

City can claim to have had more of the play, especially after the interval, when they fought desperately to equalise a goal scored by Bowden three minutes before half-time. But they met a wonderful defence.

JACKIE BROWN HELD TO DRAW IN SCOTLAND

REFEREE'S VERDICT UNPOPULAR

BENNY LYNCH'S REMARKABLE FIGHTING POWERS

Glasgow, Mar. 5.

Jack Brown, fly-weight champion of the world, fought a draw with Benny Lynch, the champion of Scotland, over 12 rounds at the Kelvin Hall, Glasgow, last night.

It was a most unpopular decision, the crowd booing and hissing the referee's verdict. Many were of the opinion that Lynch was an easy winner from the sixth round. Brown's title was not at stake, the men weighing-in at 8st 4lb.

Scot Attacks First

From the start the Scot attacked and forced Brown to the ropes, but the champion's defensive work saved him. Brown began the second round in whirlwind style with hard punches to the body and head. Lynch retaliated, but Brown continued to be the aggressor and

ENGLAND-SCOTLAND SOCCER REFEREE

The International Selection Committee, meeting in London, decided to suggest to Scotland the appointment of Mr. W. McClean (Ireland) as referee for the Scotland v. England match at Hampden Park next Saturday. They also decided that an English team should meet Holland in Amsterdam on May 18.

GRAND NATIONAL SEQUEL

Miss Dorothy Paget And Trainer Fall Out

London, to-day.

As a sequel to his failure in the Grand National, Golden Miller, the 1934 winner, and the other jumpers owned by Miss Dorothy Paget are leaving trainer Briscoe's stables at Newmarket for other quarters, though this does not necessarily mean that Miss Paget will not have any horses in future training with Briscoe, since she owns many flat-racers.

It is understood that Miss Paget informed Briscoe, after the National, that she was not satisfied with the training of Golden Miller, whereupon Briscoe replied that in view of her statement he must request the removal of Golden Miller and her other jumpers from his charge.

Miss Paget refuses to confirm or deny the rumours, but Reuter understands that there is no doubt regarding her truth.

It is believed that Donald Snow, who already trains a few horses for Miss Paget, will be taking over Golden Miller and the other jumpers. — Reuter.

FAMOUS AMERICAN RACE-HORSE

Twenty-Grand To Race In England

Lexington (Kentucky), Feb. 25.

Twenty Grand, winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1931 and holder of the American record for the mile and a quarter, has left for England, according to a telegram received by the officials of the Greentree Farm from Mrs. Harry Payne-Whitney, Twenty Grand's owner.

New Market Home

He will be placed in the care of Capt. Cecil Boyd-Rochford at Newmarket and it is expected that he will meet some of the best handicap horses in England.

Twenty Grand is a 7-year-old. He was retired to the stud in 1932.

Arsenal Sign On Kirchen: Young Norwich Player

London, March 2.—The Arsenal have signed Alfred John Kirchen, the 21-year-old Norwich City outside-right. It is understood that Mr. George Allison, the Highbury club's manager, paid a £5,000 fee for the player, thus outbidding Tottenham Hotspur, who were interested in the player.

Three months ago Kirchen was practically unknown in big football.

Twenty years after his big league debut as a south-paw pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, Babe Ruth is again back in Boston. His signing as assistant manager and vice president of the Boston Braves takes him from New York, which he has called home for 15 years, to the city where he started his climb to undying baseball fame. It is another home run for the Bambino!

SHANGHAI GERMAN CLUB HOCKEY VISIT

PUNJAB REGT. BEATEN BY MACAO IN HOCKEY CLASH

SOLDIERS MISS DULLA SINGH AT PIVOT

An excellent game of hockey was witnessed at Macao on Sunday when the 1/8 Punjab Regiment were overwhelmed by the Macao Hockey Club by 7 goals to 1, the feature of the encounter being the brilliant display of the home team's forwards.

The Punjabis were without the services of Dulla Singh, the Interport pivot, who is still suffering from an injury to his right knee sustained in the International series last Thursday on the Marina ground.

Sparkling Hockey

The Macao team played sparkling hockey, the brilliant combination of their forwards proving the undoing of the visiting defence, which was pierced on three occasions in the opening half.

DESIRE FOR ONLY TWO GAMES

DRAW FOR GROUNDS IN INTERNATIONAL SERIES

The Interport hockey encounter between the Shanghai German Hockey Club and the Colony will take place on Saturday, April 13, on the Royal Naval Recreation Club ground, King's Park, commencing at 4 p.m.

The visitors, who are the champions of the Shanghai Hockey League, are expected to arrive in the Colony on Friday week, and have expressed the desire to play only two matches, as a result of which, the game against the Combined Services has been cancelled.

The visitors will meet the Civilian team on Monday, April 15, on the same ground as the Interport encounter, but commencing at 5.10 p.m.

Following the latter game, there will be an Interport dinner-dance at the Peninsula Hotel on Monday night, tickets for which can be obtained from all hockey clubs.

The Shanghai team will leave the Colony for Macao on April 18, and will return to the Colony on April 19.

The final Colony and Civilian trials will probably take place this coming week-end.

INTERNATIONAL TOURNAMENT

The draw for grounds for the semi-final round of the local International hockey tournament has resulted in England meeting China on the H. K. S. R. A. Marina ground on Thursday, while India will encounter Portugal on the Club ground.

Both games will commence at 5.10 p.m. prompt; the first named teams will wear white shirts.

LADIES' YACHTING

HIS THIRD DEFEAT BY EX-PROFESSIONAL

THREE SETS OVER IN FIFTY MINUTES

EARLIER ROUNDS DESCRIBED

Monte Carlo, February 28.

G. PALMIERI, the Italian ex-professional, with victories over G. Von Cramm, of Germany, and H. W. Austin, the British holder of the trophy, has won the Monte Carlo Cup.

In the final before a crowded gallery to-day he beat Austin by 6-1, 6-1, 7-5. Palmieri appears to be Austin's bete noir. They have met three times — twice within a week — and Palmieri had triumphed each time.

To-day's final was nearly a rout, and was over in 50 minutes. For two sets and seven games — that is, until he had match ball at 5-2 in the third set — the stocky little Italian dominated the court.

Then there was the longest rally of the match, consisting of 60 strokes, which Austin won. It was a desperate bid of Austin's to avert disaster. Palmieri was temporarily shaken by this check, and Austin won the ninth and tenth games with the loss of only one point.

Had he attacked strongly he might have saved the set and prolonged the struggle. But his physical condition appeared poor, although he was not exhausted at the end. His length was short throughout, his back-hand down the line refused to function, and he netted the easiest of volleys.

Palmieri seemed to cast a spell over him; he was repeatedly trapped by drops and lobs. Had Austin's length been better, had he found the lines instead of hitting inches over them, Palmieri could not have controlled the tactics as he did.

Italian's Trick Shots. Braced by the flowing tide, the Italian indulged in trick shots, using a delicate drop smash when lobbed, and heavily slicing some of his cross volleys. Except when he dropped his first match ball, he scarcely made a mistake.

LADIES MEET
CAMBRIDGE IN
GOLF MATCHMiss Fishwick's Duel
With LucasLIGHT BLUES WIN ALL
SINGLES MATCHES

(By GEORGE GREENWOOD)

London, March 4.
An interesting duel between Miss Diana Fishwick and P. B. Lucas, leader of the Cambridge University team, was seen at Ashridge, near Berkhamsted yesterday. It was during the match between Miss Fishwick's team of first-class golfers and the Varsity side, who conceded six strokes.

Cambridge won by the decisive margin of 10 points. By halving the foursomes, the women players flattered only to deceive, for they lost all 10 singles, much to the surprise of everybody.

Handicap Too Small

The only explanation I can offer for this overwhelming disaster, is that an allowance of six shots does not compensate for playing from the back tees on a course of 6,600 yards.

Even so, Miss Fishwick, playing with great courage, took Lucas, a young man not yet 20, who lashes the ball incredibly, distances, to the seventeenth green before being defeated.

Indeed, the match should have gone to the eighteenth, for Miss Fishwick missed a putt of a couple of feet to win the seventeenth hole. She had putted throughout with dash and boldness, and the spectators were naturally astonished when she failed to put the ball into the hole 99 times out of 100.

Lucas's 10 Fours

Lucas, who played stylish and powerful golf, completed the course in 72, a score that should have been three strokes lower if he had putted into a little more boldly. He

H. Rosario, the Macao inside-left, and F. Nolasco, at outside-right, time and again penetrated the Punjab defence.

Airosa in Limelight

A. Airosa, Macao's left-half, was head and shoulders above the remaining 21 players, giving a magnificent display throughout.

The Punjab and Interport left-wing combination, Kartar Singh and Lal Singh, proved comparatively ineffective, the latter being too well marked to be dangerous, but the former gave the Macao backs many anxious moments.

Interporter Shines

Alaf Din, the Interport left-half, gave a good display of spilling and rendered invaluable assistance throughout.

Major Campbell of the Punjab and Lt. F. da Costa, of Macao, were the referees.

Macao were represented by: Almada, J. Rodrigues and M. Cardoso; L. Ferreira, J. Ferreira and A. Airosa; F. Nolasco, Laertes da Costa, P. Angelo, H. Rosario and A. Angelo.

Had a string of 10 fours. He was two up at the fifth—a hole of 500 yards—where he crashed two shots on to the middle of the green. From this point Miss Fishwick had a brilliant patch, her net score for the next six holes being 3, 3, 3, 4, 3, 4. Winning four of them, she was up. Unable to keep up this terrific pace, Miss Fishwick was caught and passed. Lucas produced irresistible golf at the "long" and "punishing" holes.

In the general collapse of the women players Miss Pam Barton, the 17-year-old French champion, was beaten 5 and 4 by J. B. L. Lyon. Miss Barton experienced some of those days when she had to putt where any shot was going.

ARMY'S GALLANT RUGBY
80,000 SPECTATORS
AT LEAGUE MATCH

I doubt whether any other set of defenders in the country would so long have resisted City's second-half challenge. The secret of it was perfect covering. Every Arsenal man was working to a plan, and the only time it broke down City scored.

Narrow escapes there were bound to be, of course. As, for instance, when Copping, in trying to pass back to Moss, hit the post; when John saved a certain goal by thrusting out a foot and robbing Marshall as he was in the act of shooting from eight yards; or when Tilson's dipping drive cleared the crossbar by inches.

Unexpected Goals

By way of balancing accounts I will go back to the opening half and recall Drake's thrilling burst through, with a fast-running ball finishing the wrong side of the post after Swift had left the goal vacant. Also a Bastin shot struck the goal-keeper as he lay on the ground momentarily knocked out.

Apart from the scoring, those were the big thrills. The two goals were unexpectedly simple-looking affairs, both due to mistakes in defence.

Bastin's quick thinking made Arsenal's goal possible. He took a first-time kick at a high, twisting ball that most players would have let go for a corner. Dale and Cowan both missed the centre, which went on to Bowden, who was standing unmarked four yards from goal.

It was the chance of a lifetime—and Bowden nearly fooled it. His shot was half topped but, luckily, the ball kept low and Swift's frantic dive was a fraction of a second late.

Brook's Equaliser

Busby began the movement that led to the equalising goal. He beat Dougal neatly and put through to Tilson, whose shot Moss pushed away. I thought any one of three Arsenal defenders might have cleared then. There was a moment's fatal hesitation, during which Brook arrived from "nowhere" and crashed the ball into the net.

The joy of that '80,000 crowd was something worth remembering. Naturally, City went all out for the winner, but their hopes were dashed when Herd was carried on a stretcher suffering from a cut forehead. City's supporters will be relieved to hear that the injury is not as serious as it at first seemed to be.

Arsenal, though so near to victory, were well satisfied with a draw. I know they did not start on a confident note. Would John be an adequate substitute for Haggood at left-back? How would Bowden fare as an outside-right? These were worrying questions.

Roberts And John

One was answered happily. John played a fine game in his own quiet way. I did not see him make a mistake. Roberts, because he as more often forced into the picture, took first place among Arsenal's defenders, but John was a close second. Then, in order of merit, came Crayston.

In the City defence, honours are awarded first to Bray, who not only tackled surely, but was a great attacking half-back. He sent in one of the best shots of the match and was frequently a sixth forward.

Busby was good—but not so good as I have seen him. Many of his passes went wrong. Cowan played well back, except when corner-kicks were being taken—and then he found himself "marked" by Bastin!

Barkas was splendid at left-back, but I feared on one occasion that the excitement of the game would get the better of him.

City's forwards did not reproduce their form of three months ago, when I saw them last. Marshall and Herd were only moderately successful, and Tossland could never make his speed tell against Copping. Tilson was dangerous every time he was given the ball; he had an unlucky afternoon.

Dougal's Triumph

Bastin and Dougal were Arsenal's best wing. If Bastin had not feared a recurrence for his knee injury, I think he would have scored in the opening half.

His confidence returned later, and he completed the game free from the old trouble.

Dougal enjoyed quite a triumph in the Alex James role. In working the ball he was as clever as the little Scot. Drake tried very hard to force openings, but again, the stranglehold was on him. Cowan won this particular duel comfortably.

I do not think there is any doubt about Davidson making the inside-right berth his own. He has ball control and brains. But he has not yet fitted into Arsenal's style. He did far too much shooting from long range and he must learn to go back to help in defence.

Bowden, in a new position, as an outside-right, was mostly a stranger to it. He could never quite forget that he is an inside forward—and he should not be blamed for that.

Manchester City—Swift; Dale; Barkas; Busby; Cowan; Bray; Tossland; Marshall; Tilson; Herd; Brook; Arsenal—Moss; Male; John; Crayston; Roberts; Copping; Bowden; Davidson; Drake; Dougal; Bastin.

C.R.C. FINANCES IN FINE SHAPEProfit Of Over $2,500
Last Year

A satisfactory report and statement of Account was rendered at the Annual General Meeting of the Chinese Recreation Club which was held at the club's Pavilion last Sunday and which was presided over by Mr. Ng See Kwong.

The Chairman, in his review of last year, said that, financially, the Club position is exceedingly sound; last year's account showed a profit of over $2,500.

Mr. Lau Fook Kay, in proposing a vote of thanks to the committee, complimented them on being able to show a substantial profit, despite the depression. The proposal that the Committee, en bloc, should be elected again was carried unanimously.

London, to-day—B. F. S. Wyatt's jaw, which was injured while he was captaining the M.C.C. team in the West Indies, is feared to have been fractured in three places, and he now thought highly improbable that he will be able to play for only a few days.

H.K.S.R.A. WIN OVER
FUSILIERSInter-Unit Knock-Out
Hockey Series

GARTHWAITE PROMINENT

Although not playing up to their usual form the H.K.S.R.A. Brigade easily defeated the Fusiliers by 6 goals to 2 to enter the Second Round of the Senior Unit Knock-Out Hockey Tournament on the Marina ground yesterday.

Good defensive work by both teams featured the game, the Brigade team winning by virtue of their superior speed.

Metcalfe showed a return to form, and relieved several dangerous positions with hard-hitting and accurate passing. His stick-work showed a big improvement on his recent displays.

The intermediate line combined well, Ravenhill, the centre-half, playing brilliantly and allowing Johnson very little rope.

Of the forwards, Garthwaite played the most outstanding game. He was, however, unlucky to find Ramus, his winger, on one of his off days and had to rely on Aya Singh, centre forward, during all his raids.

Playing a great game under very heavy pressure Ladow, the Fusilier goalkeeper, was very cool in his clearances and played a very sound game. His anticipation was again good.

Palmer Outstanding

The full-backs, Palmer and Lewis, were responsible for keeping out many of the swift opposing attacks. Palmer, with his clean hitting, was outstanding, while the steady play of his partner constituted a sound defence.

Although having a much faster forward line against them than they could manage, the intermediate line played very pluckily, and held up several attacks by sheer determination. Pepper, at centre-half, found that he had much more than he could handle in Aya Singh, and soon dropped back as a third back.

Jones put up a good display against Ramus, and often intercepted passes from Garthwaite.

Aya Singh broke through shortly after the commencement and scored from short range, and Garthwaite made a very spectacular run from the centre line to net the second goal before half-time.

Brief Rally

After the interval the Fusiliers rallied and scored their first goal through Dandy. Their forwards, however, could not stand the fast pace which the Brigade set and soon were again obliged to take up the defensive. Aya Singh added another two and Dost Mohammed one, for the H.K.S.R.A., before the Fusiliers again replied through Johnson.

Five minutes before the final whistle Garthwaite netted the Brigade's sixth goal with a neat scoop shot.

WIN OVER NAVY
CHAMPIONS WITHOUT
COWEY & KENDREWOPPORTUNISM AND FINE
DEFENCE FEATUREDEARLY MISFORTUNE TURNS TO TRIUMPH

(By Howard Marshall)

London, March 4.

IN the presence of the Duke of York the Army beat the Royal Navy at Twickenham by a goal, a penalty goal and a try to a goal and a try. Put thus, baldly, it would seem that the result leaves us with little cause for enthusiasm. You may even argue that it is always unsatisfactory when a match is won by the margin of a penalty goal, to which I reply that if back-row forwards persist in lurking off-side these things will happen.

A plague upon back-row forwards, anyhow. The salient point about this match is that the Army won their fourth successive victory with two of their best players off the field. Cowey, their international right wing, was hurt after five minutes, much to the chagrin of one of the Welsh selectors who had come to watch him, and 20 minutes later the great Kendrew smashed a shoulder, and very reluctantly had to retire.

Sayers was put out on the wing, therefore, and with 13 men—will they ever count 13 an unlucky number again?—the Army plugged away indomitably, and by a mixture of splendid defence and intelligent opportunism were able to turn misfortune into triumph.

JACKIE BROWN
HELD TO DRAW
IN SCOTLAND

The Scot did well to dodge a left hook.

Afterward Lynch recovered brilliantly, kept Brown in the defensive, and had his opponent in difficulties with a right, followed by right and left hooks to the jaw.

In the fifth round Lynch sent Brown to the ropes, and only the bell appeared to save the champion in the seventh round.

Severe Punishment

Brown took severe punishment in the eighth and was again in difficulties at the going. He had the better of the ninth, when he landed with a stiff right hook, and his cleverness at in-fighting brought him points.

It was Lynch's turn to take punishment in the last round, when Brown was trying for a knock-out, but the Scot's defence was superb. When the referee raised the arms of both men the crowd demonstrated against the decision, and the uproar lasted for some time.

HIS THIRD DEFEAT BY EX-PROFESSIONAL

His game was exactly suited for the occasion and for Austin's physical and mental condition, but it was tennis of the Kozelub type, and only a man with Tilson's drives would have disturbed its rhythm.

Austin beat W. Hines, the American, in the semi-final round in three sets, but was within a stroke of losing the second. His driving length was never as accurate as usual.

Palmer's defeat of G. Von Cramm in the other semi-final was a big surprise. He won by 6-4, 0-6, 2-6, 7-5, 8-6. The German had a good chance in the fifth set, when he led 2-0 and 30-0.

But he withdrew his intensive pressure, and Palmer, retrieving every shot, drew level.

Von Cramm kept the lead on his service to 6-5, but then Palmer broke through to lead 7-6. The Italian won the next game on his own service for the set and match.

The Butler Trophy was won by Martin Tennant, a professional, who is the only man to have won it.

The truth is that even in the muddle and confusion of modern Rugby football quality still tells. The six Army forwards stuck to their guns heroically, and behind the scrummage such players as Dean, Cole, Unwin and Novis—particularly Novis—were a class better than their opponents.

Novis's Perfect Opening

How much the Army owed to the deftness and resource of Dean and Cole it is difficult to say—certainly a great deal—and not only did Novis play consistently well, but he paved the way to a perfect try. It was a blind-side movement—the nimble Dean passing to Novis—Novis off the mark like a scalded cat—swinging inwards; at the last moment, luring Gosling from the touch-line, and sending Hobbs racing through the gap to score.

There was the touch of quality that made the difference, the constructive element in attack which deserved its reward.

The Navy did their best, naturally, but their best was clumsy and uninspired. This brings me back at once to my old theme, the decadence of modern forward play. Let me repeat that the six Army scrummagers were heroes indeed. In the loose maels, and the line-outs, in defensive covering and falling and tackling they were tremendous, and gave the Navy pack no quarter.

Even so, they could not hold the Navy in the tight, and were beaten for possession nine times out of 18. The Navy, in short, had the ball, and what did they do with it? Nothing. Precisely nothing.

Navy Forwards Weak
They tried to heel, but their heeling was ragged and incompetent. They did not once make use of the wheel, though they should have been able to swing those six Army forwards clear and go away in smashing foot rubbers. They entirely neglected the demoralising straight shove, though they should have been able to push their opponents straight through the North stand.

They should have dominated the game, these Navy scrummagers, but they were content to be a heeling machine, and a rusty inefficient one at that. I never saw more striking proof of the need for a reconsideration of the forward's part in Rugby strategy.

A cloud of bacteria rode along with the pall of yellow dust over the Eastern skies of North America last May when the great dust storm whipped up from the drought-baked Middle West.

The records that picked up this bacterial invasion were described to the Society of American Bacteriologists recently by Bernard E. Proctor of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Western dust was collected on a series of thirty aeroplane flights in the vicinity of Boston. The planes were equipped with sticky plates to which bacteria would adhere. Both bacteria and dust particles were found at all altitudes to a ceiling of 20,000 feet, beyond which the planes did not rise.

After tea had been served the Hon. Dr. Kotewall and Lady Southern stood in the middle of the dais where Dr. Kotewall, after apologising on behalf of Sir Shou-son Chow for his inability to attend to indisposition, said:

This is probably the largest party which, in the history of Hong Kong, the Chinese have organised to pay tribute to the recipient of an honour from His Majesty the King. Lady Southern expressed her very great regret at the absence of her friend Sir Shou-son Chow and her wishes for his speedy recovery.

The chiefs of the Hauptmann prosecution and defence meet in an ante-room of Flemington court house and wish each other luck before starting summation speeches to the jury. The Attorney General proved successful and Hauptmann was sentenced to die.

GAOLER WHO FORGOT TO WIND COURT CLOCK

Absent-mindedness may result in economic disaster—or at least so the county gaoler at Hazard, Kentucky, has recently discovered. One of his major responsibilities is keeping the town clock in the court house tower wound and running properly.

Several times the amiable citizens of Hazard have peered at the honourable time piece and then felt their ire rise in a flood, for the gaoler upset all kinds of personal schedules by forgetting to wind the piece. Like all clocks, the old time marker ran down.

The irritated townsmen have decided to do something to restore the gaoler's memory, and since pay cheques are important these days, he has been warned that, if the clock runs down just once more, his salary will be cut. That ought to be a first aid to the jailer's recovery of memory.

A Chinese bag-snatcher, Chung Fuk-chung, alleged to have snatched the hand-bag of a married woman, Wong Chai-chan, in a shop at No. 148, Queen's Road Central, was remanded in police custody for 24 hours by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court this morning.

Fines totalling $500, in default six months' imprisonment, were imposed on Lo Chuen, a 27-year-old unemployed, who appeared before Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning on four charges relating to distilling, illegally, Chinese spirits, at No. 3 Hau Wong Street.

PROGRAMME

Of the four 8,500-ton Japanese second-class cruisers, the Mogami, Mikuma, Suzuya and Kumano, the first-mentioned three are expected to be finished by June 1 this year. The construction of these vessels is under the first naval replenishment programme laid down with the object of making good the defects in Japanese naval strength arising from the London Treaty.

On the completion of these three second-class cruisers, a new flotilla will be organised with them under the command of Vice-Admiral Shimada.

The Kumano, the keel of which was laid at the Kawasaki Dockyard, of Kobe, in April, 1934, is expected to be launched shortly.

RELIEF EXPENDITURE

According to an estimate made by "The Financial Post" of Toronto, Canada's total expenditure on relief during the last five years is $418,211,000. The figures presented here refer chiefly to direct relief and public works specifically undertaken for the relief of unemployment.

Empire Defence

With some of the News Agencies beginning to talk about Germany being ready for a major war next year, talk which we consider quite unjustified by anything that has recently happened, because it is far better for Germany to act openly rather than surreptitiously—it is reasonable to take a look round the Empire to take note of what progress is being made by the Imperial Defence Committee for concerted action. This does not imply any disposition to look for trouble. Hurried negotiations at the last moment mean waste of time when time is all-important; variety of equipment means confusion and needless expense; and both temper and morale are improved by proof of foresight.

The Crown Colonies may be left out of consideration on the double ground that they are under centralised control, and that in providing and protecting the splendid bases they contain they would be doing all that could be expected of them. The Dominions are on a different footing, and there is a school of writers and Service "experts" who from time to time raise the question "what would the Dominions do in a crisis?" It is the creed of this particular school that all the blame for uncertainty must be placed at the door of the "Statute of Westminster," the gist of which is that the decision must rest with the Dominion Parliaments; and that that makes it impossible to summon a known and agreed total of men by merely dispatching a cable. To that the answer is that the Statute was merely a recognition of what was the actual position in 1914. It would be impossible now, as then, to move a corporal's guard without some expense; and all the Dominions had received Responsible Government which meant at least control of their own finance, many years before the test came.

The actual problem really is how to ensure that there will be the utmost possible readiness to co-operate, and that can only be secured by agreement. In the policy that has been pursued, like most important things, the question is not new. Years ago it was condensed into one sentence by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when he said at a dinner given to him in London, "call us to your counsels." It is utterly illogical that the Dominions should have been admitted to discuss and vote at the League in Geneva while there is no regular machinery for discussion in London of the affairs of the Empire. Can it be wondered at if an arrangement that so emphasises separatism should in the course of time lead to a sentiment of separatism that did not exist when the Covenant was drafted, and that need not exist now?

The Imperial Conference already provided the germ of a consultative council that might easily have been developed. The first damper was applied by Mr. Asquith, who as Prime Minister refused to attend on the ground that it was the function of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. It is true that in the end, after much pressure, he opened the proceedings with a brief and formal welcome to London, but he refused to wait for any discussion. The next discouragement was applied by Sir Edward Grey. The delegates, including all the Prime Ministers, requested that they should be given an opportunity of explaining the views of their people on Imperial foreign policy, of which at the time they had no better information than the general public. Sir Edward replied that if anything like a council of Foreign Affairs were implied, "it would be necessary for his Majesty to get another Foreign Secretary." In the end he met the delegates and explained the principal questions and his own opinion, without inviting anyone else to give his opinion. The result was that the Dominions insisted on having the right to negotiate with foreign countries direct, which was more than they had thought of requesting before. There are as a matter of fact only two representatives with formal credentials, the Canadian and Irish envoys at Washington. Canada has special business with her big neighbour, and it was probably a relief to the British Ambassador to be rid of it; but who knows what strings have been pulled by the Irish Free State Minister when Anglo-American negotiations have been afoot? At any rate one prominent politician has boasted in the Irish Parliament that the Free State had been able to defeat proposals for a Debt Settlement, and there would never be a settlement in Washington until the Irish obligations to England were wiped out. The most hackneyed simile of all trite rhetoric is to the Sybilline Books; but it is only trite because the rulers of the nations have never learned the lesson. Foreign observers have never been able to understand our loose system of relying on voluntary aid and co-operation rooted in a common sentiment, and the authority of British Foreign Secretary would be greatly enhanced if he could say that the policy he was advocating had the backing of the whole Empire. The Government has lately decided that even the Dominion Premiers are in London for the Jubilee, there is to be no official meeting, no attempt to call them to the counsels.

MR. GREENHOUGH SMITH

Mr. Herbert Greenhough Smith, first editor of the "Strand Magazine," who has died at the age of 80, will have a place in the history of English literature as a sponsor of the short story.

The "Strand" was launched in 1891, and from the beginning Greenhough Smith went for the best short-story writers. He kept them by paying high prices. He frequently paid as much as £700 for a short story. Even in the nineties he was paying £200 to £300—a very high price for those days.

After Conan Doyle had published "A Study in Scarlet," Greenhough Smith showed him the commercial advantage of writing short stories. The Sherlock Holmes series was the result.

DISCOVERIES

Greenhough Smith's successes were numerous. Not all were discoveries. Occasional contributors like Kipling and H. G. Wells were already famous.

His list of authors, who more or less began in the "Strand" and who remained faithful to him, was impressive. It included Arthur Morrison, W. W. Jacobs, Percival Gibbon, Stacy Aumonier, and P. G. Wodehouse, whose first "Strand" story was published 30 years ago.

In private life Greenhough Smith was reserved and secretive. His life consisted of a walk from Queen Anne's Mansions to the office, from the office to the Savage Club, and from the club home again.

At one time a keen angler, his only out-door hobby for many years was watching cricket at the Oval.

ASSAULT ON MAFOO

Iron Rods Used By
Assailants

GAOL SENTENCES

A bunch of human hair and a number of bent iron rods were brought before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning as evidence against four Chinese stablemen, employed at the Jockey Club, in an assault case.

Accused were Yeung Kwan-ching, Yeung Kwong-tai, Leung Sum and Yim Hi-foo, while the complainant was Ng Chi-ming, all northern Chinese.

Detective Sergeant Fitches stated that when complainant went to the stable yesterday 10 men gathered and attacked Ng with iron rods. The attack was a premeditated one as the iron rods testified—they were pulled out of the ground and bent to fit the hand.

Complainant received a number of bruises and cuts. Sergeant Fitches asked that a serious view be taken as the case might have resulted in more serious consequences had not other men in the stable intervened.

Sentence of three months hard labour was imposed on each accused except Yim Hi-foo, who was discharged.

BRITISH AIRCRAFT
FACTORIESALL AT PRESENT ARE IN DANGER ZONE
MIGHT MEAN DISASTER IN EVENT OF WAR

(By Capt. Norman Macmillan)

London. THE manufacture of aeroplanes and aero-engines, is a comparatively new industry. It possessed no appreciable output in Great Britain before 1915. It blossomed in the forcing-house of the Great War; in 1917 its call for labour and raw materials became a serious challenge to the production of guns and tanks.

Before the end of the war, production of aircraft and aero-engines in Great Britain rose to a monthly figure of 3,000. To meet this great demand, factories had grown up in places favoured by conditions which made swift production easy: in proximity to parent factories, to labour centres, and to flying ground.

During the Great War air bombing had not yet developed into a major issue of war. Our naval supremacy guaranteed us security from invasion. There was as yet no need to consider the geographical situation of our aircraft factories from the point of view of safety against attack. To-day, not all but most of the principal aircraft factories in Great Britain are still situated on war-time sites.

Insular Security Gone

The passing of 20 years has wrought a great change in Britain's insular security. The recent development in the speed and range of aircraft brings every major aircraft factory in this country within the danger zone of bombing. To leave our aircraft factories where they are at present is to invite swift disaster should there come an outbreak of hostilities with any nation within striking distance of our shores.

Is this situation serious? you may ask. I answer, yes. For these factories are the only large producers of defensive aircraft in the British Empire. If they crumple the British Empire crumples too. It is only necessary to quote from the census of production of aircraft provided by the Board of Trade to show how suddenly disaster might come upon us.

In 1930 there were only 21,576 persons employed in the British aircraft industry. The work centres of most of these persons are shown on the accompanying map. In the event of war, is there any doubt that raiding aeroplanes would be ordered to bomb these factories at the earliest possible moment after the outbreak of hostilities?

Easily Destroyed

With the power of modern bombs, with the speed of modern aircraft, the disorganisation and almost complete destruction of these relatively small factories could be carried out within two hours of a declaration of war. If this country did not possess a frontline force of bombers strong enough and efficient enough to destroy the enemy production centres, our country would be in sorry plight, brought swiftly to the point of complete defeat.

There is nothing more illogical in war than to place one's bases of supply within range of the destructive forces of an enemy. To-day, the factories from which our aircraft are supplied all lie within easy striking range of countries far more heavily armed with bombers than we are ourselves. Guns and fighting aeroplanes could not stem the whole attack. If the weather conditions favoured an invisible attack the odds are almost certain that the full strength of enemy bombers would penetrate to their objectives. Under the best possible conditions of visibility for defence it would be difficult—probably impossible—to prevent 75 per cent. from getting through.

Danger Zone

With air defence in Great Britain at present manifestly inadequate by comparison with the striking defensive air forces of other nations, it is folly to continue to build our aircraft factories where they are, in the danger zone. Even were this country equipped with a large air force with the most heavily armed nation in the air—it would still be inexcusable to leave our aircraft factories open to destruction.

Why are we so blind in Britain when other nations have taken steps to remove their aircraft factories to zones far distant from the frontiers from which they apparently expect attack to come should war arise? German factories have been removed to the Baltic shores. In France it has been decided to withdraw French factories from the neighbourhood of Paris, far south, towards the foothills of the Pyrenees.

One British aircraft manufacturer has made a public intimation of intention to remove his factory from the London area to Manchester; another has moved part of his activities to Gloucestershire. These moves show anxiety, but offer only slightly increased safety. With the speed of modern aircraft the additional margin so derived is insufficient to provide security, for the time factor gained is still too small.

Britain's Safest Spot

When one takes the geographical situation into consideration it is clear that the safest zone within the British Isles lies in Northern Ireland. As the British aircraft industry is still comparatively small, there is yet time to contemplate a change in factory situation at not too great a cost. If this decision is delayed and the people of our country suddenly see the need arising (as I believe they already do begin to see) for a rapid expansion in the aerial defensive strength of Britain, it may then become too late to make the change of factory situation.

Viewing, as I do with growing gravity the disparity between the air forces of Great Britain and those of other nations, not only in numbers, but in speed of many types of aircraft, I believe that the time has come when the complete reorganisation of this vitally important industry should be considered by the Government: not only with a view to producing aeroplanes for the Royal Air Force which are superior in performance to those of other nations, and equalling them in numbers, but in the siting of our aircraft industry in the territory most inaccessible for enemy bombers to attack.

Why Not Canada?

In Northern Ireland there should be no great difficulty in securing suitable sites for aerodromes and factories. There are lakes suitable for marine aeroplanes. But even that is not enough. There is no reason why

ILL TREATMENT OF ACROBAT

Child Goaded Incessantly With Stick

HOLLYWOOD ROAD INCIDENT

Charged with causing unnecessary suffering to an 8-year-old Chinese male-child, Wan Fun, by prodding him with a bamboo stick to force him to perform acrobatics on the Chinese recreation ground in Hollywood Road on Sunday, Ko Wai-yin, aged 27, was sentenced to one month's hard labour by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court this morning.

In his evidence, Detective-Inspector K. W. Andrews stated that at 11 a.m. on Sunday, he was passing the recreation ground in Hollywood Road, and saw a booth, in which was a fenced portion about 10 feet in length, 8 feet wide and 4 feet high. In the fenced area he saw the child, who was more or less a freak, performing somersaults. At the completion of each somersault defendant prodded the child with a bamboo stick, compelling him to carry on, incessantly, performing somersaults. There were about 30 spectators who each paid one cent for admission.

"Cumshaw" Taken From Him

Whenever a well-dressed person was admitted, the child was forced to do a few extra performances, and begged for "cumshaw," which, when given to him, was taken away by defendant. The child was also made to bow down knocking his head on the concrete ground.

Yesterday the master of the booth, Tai Kwok, came to the station to claim the child. He produced a contract agreement showing that the child had been hired in Canton to him as an apprentice to learn boxing and acrobatic arts. The agreement also showed that Tai Kwok paid a sum of $250 to the child's mother.

Tai Kwok, who was charged with the same offence pleaded that he was not present at the time when the show was on, and was subsequently discharged.

RAILWAY RECORDS SHATTERED

London Newcastle At 68 Miles An Hour

TOP SPEED REACHED OF 100.6 M.P.H.

Three records were smashed recently when a train belonging to the London and North-eastern Railway raced from London to Newcastle at an average speed of 68 miles an hour, accomplished the return journey in less than four hours and at one point sustained a speed of more than 100 miles an hour for a stretch of over 10 miles.

The train, hauled by an engine of the Pacific type, steamed out of King's Cross and roared along till Newcastle, 268 miles distant, was reached.

At one point in the journey, a speed of 88.5 miles an hour was attained.

Seven valuable minutes were lost at Doncaster owing to the derailment of a goods train ahead, but some coal wagons which were partly blocking the line were hurled down the embankment to enable the express to get past.

The express returned to London in just 9½ minutes under four hours.

Another record was smashed when it sustained an average speed of 100.6 miles an hour for a stretch of 12 miles.

BUKSON MARU OFFICER ROBBED OF $120

Mr. Bukson Maru, chief engineer of the s.s. Bukson Maru, has reported to the Police that between 10 a.m. and 11.30 a.m. yesterday some person or persons entered his cabin and stole some money and jewellery to the total value of $120.

When an extremely difficult operation proved a success, five-year-old Herb Miller, of Hartford, Conn., victim of an accident, is now able to manipulate artificial hands with his stumps of arms. He is shown recovering in the Hartford hospital.

VICKI BAUM IN COLONY

"GRAND HOTEL" AUTHORESS IS INTERVIEWED

PLEASURE TRIP WITH BROTHER

VISIT TO KO SHING THEATRE

VICKI BAUM

"I have written better books, but there must be something in 'Grand Hotel' that made it a success; what that something was I never knew, and it had a success I never thought," said Miss Vicki Baum, the famous German authoress of "Grand Hotel" to me last night when interviewed at the Hong Kong Hotel after her arrival here, by the s.s. President Lincoln earlier in the day.

Miss Baum, who is accompanied by her brother on this pleasure trip through the East, is outstanding among the few personalities in the world of letters who have visited the Colony this year. Of medium height and build she possesses a pair of large blue eyes, blonde hair and a clear complexion. She is a little over 30 years of age and of a charming disposition.

Up to 1932, when success came to her through "The Grand Hotel," Miss Baum already had nine books to her credit. Since then she has written three additional novels. "Life Goes On" (1933), "Falling Star" (1934), and "Men Never Know" (last month). She writes all her stories first in German.

Speaking English fluently like a native-born American, Miss Baum only took up the study of English three years ago when she, together with her family, left Germany for her adopted country, the United States.

"I could write in English, but it would not be my own style, it would not be myself. My style would then become as stiff as a schoolgirl's," she commented.

Miss Baum is a prodigy, for at the age of 18 she was a professor of music, and had played her way with her harp into the hearts of German audiences since her ninth year. At the age of 20 she became "chamber musician" at the Court of the Brand Duke of Hessen. It was during this period that she found romance, for very shortly afterwards she married Mr. Richard Lert, her orchestra conductor.

BEGAN WRITING IN FRENCH

Her first literary effort was made at the age of 14, when a short story in French entitled, "Discretion," was published. From the time of her marriage, for seven years up to 1932, she was the editor of three German magazines. It was during this period also that the greater number of her books were written, but she was unknown outside Germany until the London publishing firm of Geoffrey Bles bought the English rights of her most noted novel, "Grand Hotel," which was translated by Mr. Basil Craighton.

During the Great War, Miss Baum nursed babies in Southern Germany. For five weeks she acted as a chambermaid at the Hotel Bristol, Berlin, in order to learn the real facts of hotel life.

"You remember the old book-keeper in 'The Grand Hotel' who takes a last fling at life? The book was first written about and around him, from his infancy to the time of his death. After five weeks as a chambermaid I decided to destroy the manuscript and to concentrate on his last hours. Then the other four main characters began to intrude upon my mind."

Referring to her name Miss Baum said: "Vicki is short for Victoria, and Baum, as you know, is the German word for tree. In Shanghai, the Chinese called me Lin, the Chinese word for forest, because, they said, I am not a tree, as I have two children." Miss Baum and her husband, Mr. Richard Lert, (who is now an orchestral leader in America), as well as other members of her family, have already sent in their naturalisation papers to the American Government.

The distinguished visitor said that she could not form an opinion of China. Everything seemed to her, she said, so picturesque and confused at the present time.

"Later on, on my way back from Java, I may be able to, but I think the Chinese girls are lovely, especially their hands. Hong Kong, even for the few hours that we have spent here, seems to us the most beautiful port in the Far East. The scenery upon the Peak is simply marvellous."

Talking on the subject of new American fiction, Miss Baum thinks that Ernest Hemingway is one of the finest writers to-day.

Continuing, she said, "I think the greatest American writer to-day is Sinclair Lewis, though not of course, because he won the Nobel prize." When reminded that Lewis was criticised when he received the honour she said: "Lewis is a fighter as you will see in each one of his books. He gives the most complex picture of American life to-day. No one but him could have written 'Main Street' and created 'Babbitt' He well deserved the honour."

Turning to the younger American women writers, Miss Baum said that she first had the work of Katherine Brush, one of America's most promising women writers and author of "Manhattan" and "Red Headed Woman," translated into German and published in her magazines.

"I was the first one to publish in German, 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes' by Anita Loos, which I now work as scenario writer at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Hollywood."

GERMAN AUTHORS
Thomas Mann, author of "Magic Mountain," and Nobel prize-winner, and Frau Vicki Baum's opinion, will live for many generations to come. "I know Erik Remarque," the author of "All Quiet On the Western Front," personally. He is a quiet man, never-shattered by the war, and as he tells us in his preface, we are a generation broken by the war. Although he has achieved a

"WARTIME" barred, of course," said the Doctor. For the talk, ranging lightly over tuna-fishing, spiritualism, and the best way to make marmalade, had finally settled upon the subject of risk; and a risk, as the Doctor now laid down, cannot by definition be an integral part of the day's routine.

"Wartime" barred, then, said Bamber, "what's the biggest risk you've ever taken?" And his light inquisitive eyes, glanced swiftly round the table. They had been playing bridge, but now sat with pushed-back chairs and replenished glasses; the Doctor and Henry Cotterill, who had just won the rubber, Bamber and the Policeman, who had lost.

Both Bamber and the Doctor had been at Jutland, though not in the same ship: the Policeman worked at a desk in Scotland Yard, and was popularly supposed to control the Mansion House traffic. As for young Cotterill, he wrote books on medieval art, making an odd fourth, indeed, to such a trio; but as he never mixed art and conversation, their acquaintance continued to flourish.

"Me?" said the Policeman, thoughtfully. "Oh, nothing much. I lead such a quiet life. Well—bankruptcy, I suppose."

Bamber looked at him with frank disappointment. "That's nothing," he said. "Why, I'm bankrupt at this very minute. I mean, I should be if I were in trade or anything. What about you, Doctors?"

RUSSIA'S RICHEST MEN

Fortune From A Play

The richest men in Russia to-day are not the bankers, industrialists, or great surgeons. These are all relatively low-paid officials. The rich men are the playwrights, and the richest of them all is M. Vasily Vasilievitch Shkvarin, author of "Another Man's Child."

This rollicking but decidedly mediocre farce ran for 15 months in more than 1,000 theatres and clubs throughout the Soviet Union. Four big Moscow theatres have played it continuously. The work bears no trace of Marxism, Leninism, or Stalinism, and was passed for presentation after a solemn official committee had decreed that "Bolsheviks must learn to laugh."

After another two or three years of such success M. Shkvarin will be a millionaire—in Soviet roubles.

HUGE HEROIN PILL HAUL

On the application of Revenue-Officer A. W. Grimmitz, 114,000 heroin pills, found in room No. 313, Tai Lo Sin Hotel, Des Voeux Road Central on March 25, were confiscated by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning.

financial success and fame, and has a beautiful wife, the last time I saw him he was still looking depressed."

Last night I took Miss Baum to witness her first Chinese stage play in the Orient, at the Ko Shing Theatre. It was a disappointing performance, but the noted authoress said, "I have seen better Chinese actors and acting (in San Francisco, but I simply want to get the atmosphere and to see the Chinese audience's reaction. No, I am not collecting material for a new book, I hate people who tour the world in six months and think they can write volumes on their travels."

Asked what her next book will be, Miss Baum said that she has already finished the first draft of "Career," but it will not be finished for another year. "When I finish a book, I always think that it will not be good enough and throw it aside for a long while and go on with some other work before I pick it up again."

Asked if she has any ideas on reform to give to the world, she modestly said, "I am so small, and the world is so large." She refused to make any comment on Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Miss Baum and her brother, Mr. Fritz Lindner, left here this morning by the s.s. Tilasane for the Straits Settlements and Java, and as he tells us in his preface, we are a generation broken by the war. Although he has achieved a

"It's difficult to say. Of course, I've risked killing people almost every week—any house-surgeon does: but that's barred on the war principle. Otherwise, I should probably say—walking along the ridge-pole of the gymnasium for a bet of two apples. What's yours?"

"Mine," said Bamber, promptly, "was proposing to a girl at Malta to see whether I was in love with her or not. I couldn't make up my mind, and it seemed a good way of finding out."

"And did you?" asked the Policeman.

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's Story will be "White Man's Ways," by D. Wilson MacArthur.

"I did. Fortunately, she refused me. But I had all the sensations first."

"What uneventful lives!" murmured the Doctor. "Yet they seemed quite interesting at the time. What about you, Cotterill? What's the biggest risk you've ever taken? Being hit by a cricket-ball?"

"Oh, a bit stiffer than that," said Cotterill modestly. "Being guillotined. It happened in Paris."

"Naturally," interjected Bamber, "but tell us what you were trying to do. Restore the Bourbons?"

"No. There was a girl—"

"Of course!"

"Not of course at all," said Cotterill, crossly. "She had a face like a bun and I was no more in love than the Doctor is now. And stop interrupting. No, it was simply that I'd been knocking about America for a year and a half, and she—she reminded me of home. I called her the Vicar's Daughter."

"I was dead nuts on getting back to England, you see, but I was also pretty well broke; and as the French Exhibition was just being talked about for Burlington House, it struck me that I might possibly turn an honest penny by writing a popular handbook: so instead of coming straight home, I side-stepped to Paris to take a look at the Louvre. And, as usual, when I'm only there for a few days, I put up at what we will call the Grand Hotel Humide. It's a second-rate little hole, but I liked to look at the people. They were amazing. You know how some hotels seem able to live a double life and get away with it? Well, the Humide was one of those."

"It had two distinct clienteles, one composed chiefly of English clerical men, the other as cheerful a set of rogues and vagabonds as you could find, even in Paris. It used to amuse me just to sit in the entrance lounge and watch them go in and out—first an elderly couple from a Yorkshire parsonage, come over on an excursion to see their daughter the governess; then a pair of shrill-voiced native countesses, ogling the old man from sheer force of habit."

"There was always a sprinkling of English honeymooners, too—I think they must have recommended it to each other at the parish whist-drives—balanced by an equally large sprinkling of doubtful Semites; altogether a very well-proportioned mixture of sheep and goats—like Judgment Day, you know, only before they're sorted out. As soon as I got there I always used to award a first prize in each class: well, the goats that year were all much of a muchness; but in the sheep the Vicar's Daughter won hands down."

"She had a pink bun-shaped face, nice fair hair, and a figure that wasn't boyish but simply like a boy's; and the curious thing was that I'd already had that very afternoon, going solemnly round the Louvre with a catalogue in one hand and a pencil in the other. She had struck me then, even amongst all the Easter-excursion schoolmarmes, on a red plush bench in the lounge of the Humide she stood out like a bar of brown Windsor in a film-star's bathroom."

Cotterill paused, surveying his simile as a child might survey an extra-large bubble; and indeed, for him, it was a remarkable sight. "She was wearing," he continued, "a nice sensible raincoat and a little tweed cap. In the lapel of the coat was a Girl Guide clover-leaf, and appearing at her neck a sort of old Etonian tie."

CHANNEL BUOYS

WHAT would modern navigation do without the channel buoys—those floating markers that keep ships off the shoals? In a very real sense, the advertisements in this paper are channel buoys, placed for your protection—for the safeguarding of the family expenditures.

These advertisements are the signed statements of reputable firms who seek your patronage on the single basis of giving value for every dollar spent. They are honest statements, the only kind an advertiser can use and remain an advertiser.

People who get the most for their dollar in the market-places are those who keep an eye on the channel buoys. Day by day, they follow the advertisements to learn what and where to buy to the best advantage. Make this a habit. Study the advertisements, in the interest of shrewd buying.

The advertisers in this paper have charted the channels of buying for you. Keep to the course.

"It made me homesick to look at her. I thought of Vienna, of parties, and croquet on the lawn; I even thought of Lower School chapel and the Head's confirmation classes. At last, when I could bear it no longer, I went over and asked her the way to Notre Dame."

"She answered readily but stiffly, just as I had expected, and offered me the map at the end of her guide-book. It had a name on the fly-leaf—Mary something or other—and as I took it there fell out a ticket for the Comedie Francaise and a postcard reproduction of Leonardo's Holy Family. The theatre-ticket proved a blessing: it was for that night, for Les Precieuses Ridicules, a play which I dimly remembered as being by Moliere; and on the subject of French teaching in lower forms we got on swimmingly."

"It was a topic in which she was particularly interested, for she had just been appointed junior French mistress at a girl's boarding-school on the South Coast. 'I won't tell you the name of it, because she's probably there now, but it was a post, I gathered, so deservingly sought after that she had had to meet and vanquish no less than 75 highly qualified competitors. No sooner had she heard of her success than she dashed over to Paris to put a final polish on her already immaculate accent; and that was how she came to be sitting on a red plush bench in the lounge of the Humide."

"The rest of her life-story took about five minutes. There wasn't much to tell, of course; she had once reached the semi-final of the county tennis-championships, and once been knocked over on her bicycle; otherwise, the high light of her existence was this remarkably superior job which she had so deservingly snaffled. Term started in two days' time, so that she was leaving first thing in the morning; but I felt as morally braced by our brief conversation as though I'd spent a week in Devonshire."

"By way of return I got a waiter to bring us tea—a thing she'd never achieved there before—and the way she tucked into those brioches was a pleasure to behold. 'Soon after tea we both went up to change, and I also discovered that our rooms were next door to each other; but whereas she spent the evening at the Comedie Francaise, I went to the Lune Rousse—and several other places as well.'"

"I thought you'd just been morally braced, or something," murmured the Doctor.

"So I had, I felt ready for anything. Even"—Cotterill grinned oddly—"even for what was waiting when I got back. It was somewhere between three and four in the morning, and except for the porter not a soul stirring; even the lift had stopped. I walked up by the stairs, went down the corridor, and there, just outside my door, leaning against the wall, was the Vicar's daughter."

"She had on a blue flannel dressing-gown, and felt slippers; and from the colour of her face my first thought was that she had been taken ill. But her eyes were staring open, and as soon as she saw me she tried to move forward. I ran and caught hold of her, of course, and asked what was the matter and as soon as she could steady her lips, she told me."

"There's a dead man in my room," she said; and the next moment fainted clean away."

Abruptly, partly from a sense of climax, partly to see if they were believing him, Cotterill broke off his story and glanced round the table. But they were all three men of a certain experience.

"Go on," said Bamber. "What did you do?"

"Well, first I tried the door of her room, but it was shut, and, like most hotel doors, wouldn't open from the outside without a key. So I poked her up and carried her into mine. I'd brandy there, as it happened; and a hot-water bottle, and in about five minutes she was coming round. I made her walk a bit longer, though, before she tried to talk, and at last she was sitting up, quite comfortable, in an armchair."

And then she told me the rest."

"Just after two o'clock she was awakened by the sound of her door shutting. 'Not opening, you see, but being pulled quietly to. Naturally she was frightened. She sat up and switched on the light, and, first of all, she saw a figure in a doorway, though perhaps she'd been told a look under the door and found over the side, saw lying just inside the door the body of a man. He had a knife through his heart, and he was quite dead."

"The Doctor looked up curiously."

"How did she know? It's not like blowing your brains out."

"That's what I asked. And she told me—can you imagine how it sounded?—that she'd been in the Girl Guides. She'd brought herself to look at him, you see, and then lost her nerve and dashed out into the corridor, too frightened to get the porter or ring for help; she must have been there nearly an hour, waiting for someone to pass; but our rooms were in the heart of the English quarter, and they'd all gone to bed."

"Well, I thought I'd better have a look, all the same, because not even Girl Guides can often have to deal with knife wounds; so before getting the management, I asked her to stay where she was while I went and inspected."

"You'll want the key," she said, almost calmly; and feeling in her blue-flannel pocket she pulled out a handkerchief and the key and a sort of bathing-cap, all just as she'd pushed them in damp after her bath. It was the mix-up of everything," said Cotterill, suddenly, "hot baths and murder, you know, that made it all seem so beastly. Well, I wasn't exactly looking forward to it, but I took the key and let myself into No. 61." He broke off, and reached for his glass.

"And... was there?" asked the Doctor.

Cotterill nodded.

"There was. Exactly as she had said. It was lying just inside the room, as though someone had simply opened the door and shoved it through. 'A man,' and quite dead; and I also saw, what she evidently hadn't liked to tell me, that he was dressed in nothing but a pair of pyjamas. Sticking out between his ribs was the haft of what looked to me like an old German trench-dagger; I didn't touch it, of course, but it had the same short curve and was made of black wood. 'As for the man himself, he was a great hulking fellow, much bigger than most Jews, but with a strongly Israelite cast of feature, and he had a remarkably smooth, pale skin.'"

"My God!" said the Policeman suddenly.

"Yes," said Cotterill, "it was pretty horrible. And somehow, that smooth skin—with the blood on it, you know—seemed to flash things off. I don't wonder the girl fainted; I nearly did myself. But the worst of all was that—that I knew him. Only by sight, of course, but he was one of the doubtful Semite party I'd noticed in the lounge. Add I don't know why, but somehow it made me feel sorry for him, dirty customer though he so obviously was. I mean, I'd always noticed how he enjoyed his soup. Well, to cut out the sob-story, I went back to my own room and said I was going for the manager."

"I'm afraid that'll probably fetch the police," I said, (she was clinging to my arm as white as a sheet again), 'but all you've got to do is to tell them exactly what you told me and try not to mind.'"

"I didn't seem to comfort her much. She just clung tighter than ever, and said 'Thank you very much, but won't I have to—'

"Give evidence?"

"I'm afraid that's inevitable," I said. "But you report that you saw my name in the paper?"

"Yes, but won't I have to—"

"Give evidence?"

BRITISH MEDALS AWARDED FOR GALLANTRY

The King, on the recommendation of the President of the Board of Trade, has awarded Silver Medals for Gallantry in Saving Life at Sea (Foreign Services) to Mr. Takejiro Ikemoto and Mr. Ueoku Kozumi, of Kobe, in recognition of their gallantry in attempting to save a British subject, Mrs. Milner-Barry.

During a typhoon in the afternoon of October 20, 1933, the Japanese Yashima Maru, while on a voyage from Beppu to Kobe and Osaka, foundered off the coast of Suma (about two miles from Kobe Harbour).

In the Typhoon

Mrs. Milner-Barry, one of the two British subjects on board, began to swim to the shore soon after 1 p.m. At about 3.45 p.m. Mr. Ikemoto, who was on the shore, saw her near a break-water. He knew that there were rocks in the vicinity which might prove dangerous to a swimmer, and tried to attract her attention so that he might guide her to a place of safety. As Mrs. Milner-Barry did not acknowledge the signals, Mr. Ikemoto and Mr. Kozumi jumped into the sea, and Mr. Ikemoto succeeded in grasping her. In spite of the rough sea and high wind which threatened to sweep both Mr. Ikemoto and Mrs. Milner-Barry against the rocks, Mr. Ikemoto was able to bring her safely ashore. There she received every attention, but she died later in the day.

Both Mr. Ikemoto and Mr. Kozumi incurred considerable risk in their brave attempt to rescue Mrs. Milner-Barry under such conditions.

ANGLO-POLISH DISCUSSIONS OPEN TO-DAY

views of various powers are now more clearly understood. The exploration character of the visits has throughout been emphasised, and at this moment concrete results are not expected. Nor is any early statement of the Government's appreciation of an admittedly anxious position in Europe to be anticipated.

The whole field will be further surveyed in the Anglo-French-Italian conference at Stress next week, and another opportunity for exchanges of views between the statesmen will arise at the meeting of the Special League Council at Geneva a few days later.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS

The cordial atmosphere in which the discussions with M. M. Stalin and Litvinoff took place in Moscow and with Reichsfuehrer Hitler in Berlin is appreciated here. The importance attached by the Soviet Government to the maintenance of peace by a system of collective security, through the League of Nations is noted with satisfaction, and on this, as on other matters dealt with in the Anglo-French declaration of February, a frank exchange of views revealed that there is at present no conflict of interest between the two Governments. In the words of the joint communique, "This fact provided a firm foundation for the development of fruitful collaboration between them in the cause of peace."

THE MEMEL QUESTION

In the House of Commons yesterday the Foreign Secretary was questioned regarding the nature of Britain's intervention with other signatories of the Memel Statute, and Sir John Simon said that representations were made to the Lithuanian Government by the British, French and Italian Governments. In these representations the Lithuanian Government informed that the present situation in Memel Territory, in which no Directorate possessing the confidence of a chamber exists, is incompatible with the principle of the autonomy guaranteed to the territory by the statute, and that it is the duty of the Lithuanian Government to bring this situation to an end without delay.—British Wireless Service.

Conversations with Marshal Pilsudski and members of the Polish Government open to-day and will conclude on Wednesday, when Mr. Eden will leave for Prague for a brief exchange of views with the Czechoslovak Government on Thursday morning.

It is expected that he will return to London by air on Thursday evening.—British Wireless Service.

SLUM CLEARANCE IN HANKOW

Insanitary Straw Huts To Be Abolished

The Hankow Municipal Government has decided to appropriate $200,000 out of the Provincial Reconstruction Bonds for the building of model dwelling houses for the city's poor. The chief object is to eliminate the insanitary straw huts in the outskirts of Hankow, which are in a most insanitary condition.—(Chekiang Agency).

QUESTIONS RAISED IN COMMONS

Mr. Gordon Hall Caine, Conservative M.P. for East Dorset, asked whether any further consideration had been given to the desirability of Britain following the example of Russia and Italy and raising the Legation in China to the status of an Embassy.

Sir John Simon replied that the Government's attitude was indicated in his statement of November 5 last.

Maj.-Gen. Sir Alfred Knox, Conservative M.P. for the Wycombe Division of Buckinghamshire, inquired as to the extent of Communist activities above Hankow, particularly in Szechuen. Sir John Simon briefly reviewed their activities in recent years.—Reuter.

NO CHANGE YET

In the House of Commons on November 5 Sir John Simon said that the Government did not at present propose to raise the Legation to the status of an Embassy.

Sir John said that an understanding had been reached in 1919 with certain Powers that no new Embassies should be created without previous accord.

Confidential conversations, with special reference to China, had been held, he said, at the time with other Powers. Italy, however, had reserved freedom of action in countries where other European Powers already had Embassies.

After dealing with Italy's action on September 25 in raising her Legation in China to the status of an Embassy, Sir John Simon said the British Government did not propose to make any change yet.

INTERNATIONAL SOCCER

In last year's encounter, played at the Wembley Stadium, England defeated Scotland by three clear goals, Bastin and Brooks who are included in the present team, each scoring once, while Bowers, of Derby County, accounted for the third goal.

As the teams now stand in the table, England must win or draw Saturday's encounter to annex the international championship; if they lose they will share the championship with Scotland.

PROPAGANDA AND PUBLICITY BUREAU FORMED

Hereafter the new secretariat will release official reports on anti-Communist suppression in Kwangtung. Foreign newspapers and magazines, will be examined and interesting items and articles will be translated for the information of the high military officials.

Such work was done before by the Political Training Department, but it was dissolved some time ago owing to the fact that many members of the Department had to undergo further training at Military and Political Academy at Yentang.

$200 FOR 18 HOLES

An earlier cable stated that Joyce Wethered, Britain's foremost lady golfer, had accepted an offer to tour America, giving exhibition matches.

If the final negotiations are as satisfactory, as it is anticipated they will be, she will leave next month for an eight weeks' tour.

The contract, it is stated, will provide for the payment of a substantial sum, believed to be running into four figures, which would automatically make her a professional, though her amateur status has already been doubted since she is now manageress of the sports department of a London store.—Reuter.

GENERALISSIMO'S PLAN

PLANS BEING FORMULATED

"The preliminary steps in this movement must be the abolition of illegal taxation, the exemption and reduction of export duties, the promulgation and enforcement of new and modernised coinage laws and the restriction of the issuance of paper money."

The methods of procedure and the application of the principles of a people's economic movement are now being formulated by the Generalissimo.—Reuter.

AMERICAN ECONOMIC MISSION ON WAY TO CHINA

The American Economics Commission to China left America on March 22 and is due in China about the middle of April after spending about two weeks in Japan.
